ADVERTISEMENT.

DOCTOR MARCH continues as usual to receive pupils for instruction, throughout the year, in the various branches of Physic and Surgery.

There will be a Lecture term of ten weeks in the winter, beginning with the first week in January, in which will be given a complete course of Lectures on Practical Anatomy and Operative Surgery. Throughout the remainder of the year, frequently Practical and Clinical Lectures will be given.

Great facilities will be afforded for the study of Anatomy during the winter term. Ample opportunity will be afforded, and provision made for private dissection—a privilege as rare as valuable, but without which no one can obtain an adequate acquaintance with Anatomy and Surgery. Rooms will be provided, and every thing supplied calculated to facilitate the progress of the Student. Free access will be had to the best Anatomical Museum in this part of the country—good Library, &c.

TERMS OF TUITION.

Fifty dollars per year, inclusive of the winter course.

Ticket for the winter course of Lectures only, on Anatomy and Surgery, ten dollars.

☞ Good board and lodging can be had at two dollars per week.

To make the advantages of this institution still greater, during the winter course of lectures, the general class will be divided into classes of four pupils in each, and to every such class a subject will be furnished for private dissection, with an additional fee of five dollars only, from each Student.

The Senior Students, those particularly who are advanced in the study, can have good opportunities to see practice, and practice themselves, under the general direction of the instructor. The opportunity of seeing a great variety of surgical practice will be first rate.

Ophthalmic Surgery is a branch that is particularly cultivated; and we will here take occasion to say, that all operations on the eye, and indeed all Surgical Operations, will be performed gratuitously upon the poor, during the winter course of lectures, which we trust will be fulfilling two benevolent objects, viz : relieving the poor and afflicted, and imparting practical instruction to students and young physicians, through whom the benefits will be extended to a wide circle of the human family.
